Full job description

We have a rare opportunity for a part-time journalist to join the Australian Community Media team on the Far South Coast.

You will need to have good news sense and general knowledge, plus a strong community focus. You will collaborate with other journalists, the sales department and other ACM colleagues to implement editorial initiatives that will reaffirm the dominant position of our mastheads in their respective markets.

This position would suit an experienced journalist, or someone with relevant tertiary qualifications looking to make a mark in the industry. This is an extremely fast-paced and constantly changing environment so the successful applicant will need to be energetic, well presented and prepared to learn new things every day.

We are looking for a person with the ability to write cleanly, take good photos and have a knowledge of social media with a genuine interest in the community. Drivers license is a must.

Australian Community Media's hundreds of newspapers and websites in rural, regional and suburban communities play a vital role in delivering quality journalism and information in print and online, and connecting advertisers to our audiences. Our evolving business is introducing new technologies and doing things differently to ensure our trusted mastheads meet the changing needs of both audiences and advertisers.

If you enjoy a dynamic working environment you will thrive in our collaborative team culture, which is helping ACM build a stronger, sustainable and modern media network of newspapers and websites serving regional, rural and
